Just as this century drew to a close, various circumstances concurred to produce a change in men's minds. It was a universally diffused bemen's minds. It was a universally diffused belief that the world would come to an end when a thousand years from the Savior's birth were expired. The year 999 was therefore looked upon as the last any one would see. And if ever signs of approaching dissolution were shown in heaven and earth, the people of this century might be pardoned for believing that they were made visible to them. Even the breaking up of morals and law, and the wide deluge of sin which overspread all lands, might be taken as a token that mankind were deemed unfit to occupy the earth any more.

In addition to these appalling symptoms, famines were renewed from year to year in still increasing intensity, and brought the plague and pestilence in their train. The land was left untilled, the houses unrepaired, the right unvindicated; for who could take the useless trouble of plowing or building, or quarreling about a property, when so few months were to put an end to all terrestrial interests? Yet even for the few remaining days the multitudes must be fed. Robbers frequented every road, entered even into bers frequented every road, entered even into walled towns; and there was no authority left to protect the weak, or bring the wrong doer to punishment. Corn and cattle were at length exhausted; and in a great part of the Continent the most frightful extremities were endured; and when endurance could go no further, the last deswhen endurance could go no further, the last desperate expedient was resorted to, and human flesh was commonly consumed. One man went so far as to expose it for sale in a populous market town. The horror of this open confession of their deeds was so great that the man was burned, but more for the publicity of his conduct than for his inherent guilt. Nothing was sacred—nothing was safe. Even when food might have been had, the ritiated tests made have do its depressation vitiated taste made bravado of its depravation, and women and children were killed and roasted in the madness of the universal fear.

Meantime, the gentler natures driven to the rildest excess of fanaticism to find a retreat from the impending judgment. Kings and emperors begged at monastery doors to be admitted brethren of the Order. Henry of Germany and Robert of France were saints according to the notions of the time, and even now deserve the respect of mankind for the simplicity and benevolence of their characters. Henry, the Emperor, succeeded in being admitted as a monk, and swore obedience on the hands of the gentle Abbot, who had failed from turning him from his purpose.

"Sire," he said at last, "since you are under my orders, and have sworn to obey me, I command you to go forth and fullfil the duties of the State to which God has called you. Go forth, a monk to the Abbey of St. Vanne, but Emperor of the West."

Robert of France, the son of Hugh Capet, placed himself, robed and crowned, among the choristers of St. Denis, and led the musicians in singing hymns and psalms of his own composi-tion. Lower men were satisfied with sacrificing the marks of their knightly and seignorial rank, and placed baldricks and swords on the altars, and before the images of saints. Some manu-mitted their serfs, and bestowed large sums upon charitable trusts, commencing their disposition with words implying the approaching end of all. Crowds of common people would sleep nowhere but in the porches, or, at any rate, within the shadow of the churches, and other holy buildings; and as the day of doom drew nearer and nearer, greater efforts were made to appease the wrath of heaven. Peace was proclaimed between all classes of men. From Wednesday night till Monday evening of each week there was to be no violence, or enmity, or war in all the land. It was to be a truce of God.

And now came the dreadful or hoped for year. The awful Thousand had at last commenced, and men held their breath to watch what would be the result of its arrival.

"And he laid hold of the dragon, that old ser-pent, which is the devil, and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years, and east him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled; and after that he must be loosed a little season." (Rev. xx. 2, 3.)

With this text all the pulpits in Christendom had been ringing for a whole generation. And not the pulpits only, but the refection halls of convents, and the cottages of the starving peasantry. Into the castle also of the noble we have seen it had penetrated; and the most abject terror pervaded the superstitious, while despair, as in shipwrecked vessels, displayed itself amid the masses of the population in rioting and insubor-dination. The spirit of evil for a little season was to be let loose upon a sinful world; and when the observer looked round at the real condition of the people in all parts of Europe—at the ignorance and degradation of the multitude, the cruelty of the lords, and the un-Christian ambition and unrestrained passions of the clergy -it must have puzzled him how to imagine a worse state of things, even when the chain was loosened from "that old serpent," and the world placed unresistingly in his folds.
Yet, as if men's minds had now reached their lowest point, there was a perpetual rise from the beginning of this date. When the first day of the thousand and first year shone upon the world, it seemed that in all nations, the torpor of the past was to be thrown off. There were strivings pected destruction impelled all classes of society in a more honorable and useful path than they had ever hitherto trod. — White's Eighteen Christ-

STEAM GLORIFYING ELECTRICITY.—A curious cele-bration of the Atlantic Telegraph, took place at Syra-cuse, N. Y., when the news was received there of the accessful laying of the cable. Says the Syracuse

All of a sudden, and all at once, fourteen locomo-tives sent up a shriek from their steam-whistles which shook the firmest buildings to the centre, eafened every ear, and penetrated, as we verily elieve, west to Lake Erie and east to tide-water. There is no description, in poetry or prose, which can convey any just idea of the noise (that is the only word) that was thus created. It was positively word) that was thus created. It was positively awful. Such an unearthly sound—such a strange, mysterious and overwhelming sound—such a terrible, tremendous and monstrous sound—never was heard before. It reminded us of the seven thunders of the Revelation; of a legion of Niagaras; of the horn of Gabriel, (we speak reverently,) and the Day of Judgment! Men grew pale, women fainted, and children went into convulsions as they heard it.

OFFICE OF THE PANAMA RAIL-ROAD COMPANY,
New York, July 20, 1857.

The Panama Rail-Road Company takes this method of informing those interested in the Whaling business, of the advantages offered by the Railroad across the Isthmus of Panama, for the shipment of Oil from the Pacific to the United States, and for sending outfits and supplies from the United States, and for sending outfits and supplies from the United States, and for sending outfits and supplies from the United States to Panama.

The Railroad has been in regular and successful operation for more than two years, and its capacity for the transportation of every description of nerchandise, including Oil, Provisions, &c., has been fully tested. The attention of several Captains of whaleships has recently been turned to the subject of shipping their oil from Panama to New York during the present season, and the Panama Rail-Road Company has made arrangements to afford every facility which may be required for the accomplishment of this important object. A Pier, 450 feet long, has been built in the bay of Panama, to the end of which Freight Cars are run to receive cargoes from lighters or vessels lying alongside, and deliver the same alongside of vessels at Aspinwall. Vessels of from 200 to 300 tons can lie at the Pier with safety, grounding in the mud at low water.

The vessels to and from Aspinwall are fast-sailing brigs, be longing to the Rail-Road Company, and the Company is prepared to receive oil at Panama and deliver it in New York, under through the Superintendent or Company for the capacity of the casks, without allowing for wantage. For whalebone, one and one-half cents per pound. This charge covers every expense from Panama to New York, in case the oil is sent through the Superintendent or Commercial Agent of the Panama Rail-Road Company, insurance excepted. The freights may be made payable on the Isthmus or in New York at the option of the shipper.

The vessels of the Company sall regularly semi-monthly, and the average passages to and from Asp
